LETTERS from a FARMER in PENNSYLVANIA, to the Inhabitants of the BRITISH COLONIES.

LETTER III.

Beloved Countrymen,

Rejoice to find, that my two former letters to you, have been generally received with so much favour by such of you, as are sensible of the importance of the subject, and the manner in which you have treated it, cannot but command your attention. You have not, like most of our daily politicians, taken up the loads, undigested principles of the day; and, in the pursuit of your observations, suffered yourself to be diverted from the purpose of informing the minds of your countrymen, by the ridiculous custom of pleasing their ears, with the laboured harmony of a poetical sentence. You have already shown yourself perfectly acquainted with your subject, and, if any one may venture to judge of the feelings of the heart from the productions of the head, you are not a little distinguished by the theme which you have chosen. Remember, as you are from this busy scene of action, far removed from a natural love of liberty, and an affectionate regard for the interests of your country, could have urged you to such deep reflections into the nature of our constitution; and have led you to remark, with so much precision, the regular advances which have been made, from the first statutes which were framed for the regulation of our trade, down to the late alarming acts, which have passed for the disposal of our property, and the restraining of our liberty. Since the first attempt of Mr. Dunlap to inform the ignorant, and correct the prejudiced, the public has not been favoured with any one so plain, in which there has been so much argument, and so little declaration. I have been a dabbler in politics myself, but my enquiries have been hasty and desultory. Yours appear to be generally directed to the use of your country. The knowledge which you have acquired, must have cost you no small share of time and labour. You cannot devote it to a better purpose. All mankind's concern is—liberty. Proceed, then, my dear Sir, to complete the work you have undertaken. Make us acquainted with the rights of freedom; and point out to us those pernicious attempts, which may tend to their destruction. Teach us how to distinguish between the glorious glow of liberty, and the cold rays of despotism. I am, Sir, with much respect, your obedient servant.

What do their grave objections amount to?—that these colonies, which are the property of Great Britain, are not to be treated as free men, but as subjects, and that the British Parliament has a right to tax them, and to regulate their trade. I am no further concerned in any thing affecting America, than any one of you; and when liberty leaves it, I can quit it much more conveniently than most of you: but while Divine Providence, that that gave us existence in a land of freedom, permits my head to think, my lips to speak, and my hand to move, I shall to highly and gratefully value the blessing received, as to take care, that my silence and inactivity shall not give any implied assent to any act, degrading my brethren and myself from the brightness, whereof heaven itself is the source.

But I am to learn, that there are some few persons, who shake their heads with solemn motion, and pretend to wonder, what can be the meaning of these letters. "Great Britain," they say, "is too powerful to contend with; this is deigned to oppress us; it is vain to speak of right on one side, when there is power on the other; when we are strong enough to resist, we shall attempt it; but now we are not strong enough, and therefore we had better be quiet; it signifies nothing to convince us that our rights are invaded, when we cannot defend them; and if we should get into such and such a quarrel about the late act, it will only draw down heavier displeasure upon us."

What can such men mean?—that these colonies, which are the property of Great Britain, are not to be treated as free men, but as subjects, and that the British Parliament has a right to tax them, and to regulate their trade.

Are these men ignorant, and stupid, which might have been successfully opposed as such, and might have been continued, and thus become insupportable? Do they condemn the conduct of these colonies, concerning the Stamp-Act? Or have they forgotten the success of the late Act? Ought the colonies at that time, instead of acting as they did, to have waited until the late Act was passed, and then to have acted as they did? If the behaviour of the colonies was prudent and glorious then, and successful too; it will be equally prudent and glorious to act in the same manner now, if our rights are equally invaded, and may be as successful. Therefore it becomes necessary to enquire, whether our rights are invaded. To talk of "defending" them, as if they could be no otherwise "defended" than by arms, is as much out of the way, as if a man having a choice of several roads to reach his journey's end, should prefer the worst, for no other reason, but because it is the shortest.

As to "riots and tumults," the gentlemen who are so apprehensive of them, are much mistaken, if they think, that prudence cannot be redressed without such assistance. I will now tell the gentlemen, what is "the meaning of these letters." The meaning of them is, to convince the people of these colonies, that they are at this moment exposed to the most imminent dangers; and to persuade them immediately, vigorously, and unanimously, to exert themselves, in the most firm, but most peaceable manner, for obtaining relief.

The cause of liberty is a cause of too much dignity, to be filled by turbulence and tumult. It ought to be maintained in a manner suitable to her nature. Those who engage in it should breathe a sedate, yet fervent spirit, animating them to actions of prudence, justice, modesty, bravery, humanity and magnanimity.

To such a wonderful degree were the ancient Spartans, as brave and free a people as ever existed, inspired by this happy temperature of soul, that rejecting even in their battles, the use of trumpets, and other instruments for exciting heat and rage, they marched up to scenes of blood and horror, with the sound of flutes, to the tunes of which their steps kept pace—exhibiting, as Plutarch says, "at once a terrible and delightful sight, and proceeding with a deliberate valour, full of hope and good assurance, as if some divinity had sanctified them."

I hope, my dear countrymen, that you will, in every colony, be upon your guard against those, who may at any time endeavour to stir you up, under pretences of patriotism, to any measure, disrespectful to our sovereignty and our mother country. Not, that I forbear proceedings, in the representation of a people, as to wisdom, valour and virtue, without procuring them the least benefit. I pray GOD, that he may be pleased to inspire you and our posterity, to the last age, with that spirit of which I have an idea, but find a difficulty to express. To express it in the best manner I can, I mean a spirit, that shall guide you, that it will be impossible to determine whether an American's character is most distinguishable, for his loyalty to his Sovereign, his duty to his mother country; his love of freedom, or his affection for his native soil.

Every government at some time or other falls into wrong measures. These may proceed from mistake or passion. But every such measure does not dissolve the obligation between the governors and the governed. The mistake may be corrected; the passion may pass over. It is the duty of the governed to endeavour to rectify the mistake. And to appease the passion. They have not at all any other right, than to represent their grievances, and to pray for redress, unless an emergency is so pressing, as not to allow time for receiving an answer to their applications, which rarely happens. If their applications are disregarded, then that kind of opposition becomes justifiable, which can be made without breaking the laws, or disturbing the public peace. This consists in the prevention of the oppressor reaping advantage from their opposition, and not in their punishment. For experience may teach them, what reason did not; and harsh methods cannot be proper, till milder ones have failed.

If at length it becomes undoubted, that an inveterate resistance is formed to annihilate the liberties of the governed, the English history affords frequent examples of resistance by force. What particular circumstances will in any future case justify such resistance, can never be ascertained, till they happen. Perhaps it may be allowable to say generally, that it never can be justifiable, until the people are fully convinced, that any further submission will be destructive to their happiness.

When the appeal is made to the sword, highly probable is it, that the punishment will exceed the offence; and the calamities attending on war outweigh the preceding it. These considerations of justice and prudence, will always have great influence with good and wise men.

To these reflections on this subject, it remains to be added, and ought ever to be remembered, that resistance, in the case of colonies against their mother country, is extremely different from the resistance of a people against their prince. A nation may change their king, or race of kings, and retaining their ancient form of government, be governed by changing. Thus Great Britain, under the illustrious house of Brunswick, a house that seems to flourish for the happiness of mankind, has found a facility unknown in the reigns of the Stuarts. But if once we are separated from our mother country, what new form of government shall we adopt, or where shall we find another Britain, to supply our loss? Torn from the body, to which we are united by religion, liberty, laws, affections, relation, language and commerce, we must rise at every vein.

In truth—the prosperity of these colonies is founded in their dependence on Great Britain; and when the returns to her "old good humour, and her old good nature" as Lord Clarendon expressed it, I hope they will always think it their duty and interest, as it most certainly will be, to promote her welfare by all the means in their power.

We cannot act with too much caution in our disputes. Anger produces anger, and offence, that might be accommodated by kind and respectful behaviour, may, by imprudence, be enlarged to an incurable rage. Quarrels between countries, as well as in those between individuals, when they have risen to a certain height, the first cause of dissolution is no longer remembered, the minds of the parties being wholly engaged in recollecting and resenting the mutual expressions of their dislike. When passions have reached that fatal point, all considerations of reason and equity vanish; and a blind fury governs, or rather confounds all things. A people no longer regards their interests, but the gratification of their wrath. The way of the "Cleans and Chastity," the despising and detestable flatterers of the prevailing passion, becomes corrupted. Wife and good men in vain oppose the storm, and may think themselves fortunate, if, in attempting to preserve their ungrateful fellow citizens, they do not ruin themselves. Their reason will be called in vain; their moderation, guile; and if their virtues does not lead them to destruction, as that of many other great and excellent persons has done, they may survive to receive from their expiring country the mournful glory of her acknowledgment, that their counsels, if regarded, would have saved her.

The constitutional modes of obtaining relief, are those which I wish to see pursued on the present occasion; that is, by petitions of our assemblies, or where they are not permitted to meet, of the people, to the powers that can afford us relief.

We have an excellent principle, in whose good dispositions towards us we may confide. We have a generous, sensible and humane nation, to whom we may apply. They may be deceived. They may, by artful men, be provoked to anger against us. I cannot believe they will be cruel or unjust; or that their anger will be implacable. Let us behave like dutiful children, who have received unmerited blows from a beloved parent. Let us complain to our parents; but let our complaints speak at the same time the language of affection and veneration.

If, however, it shall happen, by an unfortunate course of affairs, that our applications to his majesty and the parliament for redress, prove ineffectual, let us then take another step, by withholding from Great Britain all the advantages she has been used to receive from us. To us let us try, if our industry, industry, and frugality, will not give weight to our remonstrances. Let us all be united with one spirit, in one cause. Let us invent—let us work—let us suffer—let us, at the same time, keep up our claim, and incessantly repeat our complaints. But, above all, let us implore the protection of that infinitely good and gracious being, I by whom "kings reign, and princes decree justice."

Nothing is to be despised of.

To the FARMER.

SIR,

All one of those who think the public greatly obliged to you, for the three useful essays with which you have already favoured them, through the channel of the venerable weekly paper. The importance of the subject, and the manner in which you have treated it, cannot but command your attention. You have not, like most of our daily politicians, taken up the loads, undigested principles of the day; and, in the pursuit of your observations, suffered yourself to be diverted from the purpose of informing the minds of your countrymen, by the ridiculous custom of pleasing their ears, with the laboured harmony of a poetical sentence. Since the first attempt of Mr. Dunlap to inform the ignorant, and correct the prejudiced, the public has not been favoured with any one so plain, in which there has been so much argument, and so little declaration. Make us acquainted with the rights of freedom; and point out to us those pernicious attempts, which may tend to their destruction. Teach us how to distinguish between the glorious glow of liberty, and the cold rays of despotism. I am, Sir, with much respect, your obedient servant.

Happy would it be for a people who anxiously cultivate the growth of liberty, if any refinement in political knowledge could enable them to frame laws, so applicable and equal to every emergency, as to remove the necessity of lodging a discretionary power in the breast of any individual. But does the imperfection of human wisdom will not admit of such a refinement, we can only exert our strength and efforts, in every delegation of our natural power, to guard, by the most prudent reservations, every such concession from those ill consequences, which may possibly follow an arbitrary exercise of this discretionary, yet dangerous authority. From you, Sir, we may now very reasonably expect (so your abilities appear equal to the task) that you will kindly communicate to us that intelligence which we so much require. Our future happiness and tranquillity, in a great measure depend upon our being able to determine, with the most exact political precision, the constitutional extent of parliamentary power;—on our having sufficient information to discover when those, who have arrogated to themselves the disputed authority, are from a reasonable regulation, or meditating an act of oppressive restraint. The right which you have already shown upon a subject so important and interesting to every colonist, it were me with a hope, that, in the continuation of your essays, you will teach us to make these distinctions, without which we can neither reason properly, nor act consistently. As you have already raised our expectations, it becomes a duty in you to gratify them; and if anything should discourage you from prosecuting the task you have undertaken, you will very deservingly meet with the approbation of the public, as well as those of

BENJ. SIMONS, Com. Gen.

One hundred Pounds Reward,

RUN away (in July last) from my cow pen, on Savannah river, a short wail fett fellow, upon the yellow or mustee order, a little bow leg'd and round shoulder'd, is very tensible, and has a remarkable scar over one of his eyes, and was seen last week near George Galt, his wife, Esq; on Savannah river, in company with Timothy Lyrell, George Black, John Anderson, Anthony Dillow, Edward Wells, and others, all horse thieves, who was then going for Rich-son's river to steal horses, as appears from the evidence of one of their accomplices now in custody.
The above reward will be given for the apprehending and delivering said fellow to the warden of the work-house in Charles-Town: and a further reward of fifty pounds, to be paid upon conviction of the fellows who stole the following horses a fortnight ago from the above cow pen, and it's believed to be by the above robbers. One large Chickens-bay gelding, fifteen hands high, dun, a small fitch tail, branded X or W, and some other brand, and purchased of one Robinson, who keeps a cow-pen on the river near Savannah town. Also a bay gelding upon fourteen hands high, white face, with remarkable bay spot in the forehead, encompassed by the whites, and has all the under part of his belly and flanks white, branded W, with perhaps the X.
A small white gelding branded W or X, with some other brand unknown, and has been burnt for a mile; also a dun gelding, black mane and tail, branded W, and appears to be of the pacing breed.
FIVE POUNDS for each of the above horses will be paid upon their being delivered to Hardy Dol-cat, Esq; or Jacob Kitter, on Savannah River, or the subscribes in Charles-Town.
WILLIAM WILLIAMSON.

PETER JOLIFF, jun. or POOLE, BEGS leave to inform the merchants, and all other gentlemen of this PYS-sance, that he has built large and commodious warehouses for the reception and shifting rice cargo, on the market, which he does on the same terms as at Cowes, or Gosport; and such gentlemen as avour him with their business will not only find the quickest dispatch, but due attention paid to their interest; and as he has room enough in his warehouses for shifting rice, rainy weather will be no hindrance to the dispatch.

LIND & CHOVIN, RETURN thanks to their friends and customers for their past favours, and beg leave to inform them and the public, that they continue to carry on the FACTORAGE BUSINESS (on Mr. Burr's wharf) in all its branches, on the usual commissions; and that they have now provided themselves with eight good schooners, which will be kept constantly in readiness for their friends orders, which will be punctually complied with in town.
N. B. Said wharf will be kept clear for coast-ers to unload, and constant attendance given; but all buicks (after the first of November ensuing) that shall lay more than one week on said wharf, after landing, shall pay for every week after, as much per week as the charge of landing.

PAUL TOWNSEND,
Has just imported in the Beaufain, Daniel Carling, miller, from London.

A FRESH assortment of goods, proper

Charles Town, January 6, 1768.

Notice is hereby given, THAT Messrs. THOMAS LISTON and WILLIAM HOPE, of Charles-Town, merchants, have assigned all their debts and effects to the subscribers, in trust, for paying, out of the money to arise therefrom, such of the creditors of MIDDLETON, LISTON & HOPE, and of the said THOMAS LISTON & WILLIAM HOPE, as shall, within twelve months from this day, consent and agree to receive a dividend of their debts, in average and proportion, as far as the said money will extend, and thereupon to execute general releases of their said debts, as against the said THOMAS & WILLIAM their other creditors are excluded from any share of the said money: Therefore those who are willing to accept dividends, upon the terms above-mentioned, are desired to signify such consent, and transmit their accounts duly attested, within the time above limited; and

Mr. PAINTE,
ON reading an advertisement in your Gazette of the 10th of November last, I must have been then and there informed. It is, that a "mafter was wanted for the free-school at Bursford's Quay, in the parish of St. Thomas; that such maffter must be personally known to the vestry of said parish, or bring proper testimonials of his former good behaviour, sobriety and diligence." It appears very strange, that after my having the said vestry 5 years and upwards, that this former well-better'd, diligent, sober man should now be wanted, while I still continue in the service of those gentlemen—surely something must be the matter, (what I they best know themselves.) It has a kind of an allusion to a line of a good old song, with a very ancient chorus to it. "Tis this and that, and 'tis that and this" tho' at present I am not in a singing humour, because it has a meaning, or tendency, that my address must have been quite the reverse. I am thankful to those worthy gentlemen in Charles-Town (12 or 14 in number) who in October 1765 recommended the subscriber, and which he thought almost equal to a testimonial; and I hope those gentlemen will suspend any ill opinion of me until I relate further. In the mean time, if the vestry (gentlemen of fortune) will but condescend to subscribe their names, certifying my negligence, in behaviour, or intemperance, as anyone particular time or place, since I commenced maffter of this beautiful, profitable free school (so intended) I will then plead guilty, and pay the price for his trouble: but can it be supposed, those gentlemen would (confident with their corporation oath, as faithful vestry men) indulge these feelings to this present time, having continued me in their service both before, and ever since the following words in the Gazette, wrote by the parish himself for that purpose, and respectively signed with their own hands, JOHN THOMAS.

A statement of the free school, founded by Richard Bursford, Esq; deceased, in the parish of St. Thomas. Bursford Esq; died the 20th day of July 1763, by the incorporated vestry of the said parish, as trustees for said school.

AFTER a strict examination of the children on this foundation, in the several branches of reading, writing and arithmetic, &c. and a particular survey of their cloaths and entertainment, it was unanimously agreed, by the said board, that Mr. John Thomas, the present maffter of the said school, had given them undue satisfaction, both as to his care and education of the said children, during the time they have employed him, and that it was their opinion he deserved encouragement; and therefore thought it just to give him this public testimony of their approbation of his conduct, as maffter of the said school.
